

MAR 2 1962

Print Edit Other
Page Page Page

Sanitized - Approved For Release : CIA-RDP75-00149R000100010015-7

NEW YORK, N.Y.
POST

EVENING 317,264
SUNDAY 257,590

FOIAb3b

CPYRGHT

MAR 1 1962

Still Hope for Cuba

There may be rejoicing in the CIA at the news that Cuba has been forced to ration, but there is no joy among us who still hope to see her evolve into social democracy as we know it.

Hunger does not generate enthusiasm for the more enlightened political processes, but rather a fierce anger against those held responsible for it. The Cubans, rightly or wrongly, blame the U. S.-imposed economic blockade for their lack of bread and meat and milk.

If we think revolution can be starved into surrender, we should look into history. George Washington could neither feed nor pay his troops, but they won in the end.

TAYLOR ADAMS. ✓

